

Hello John.

This is a kind write up we received from Mark Thomas who was running the Louse RC tyres at a winter series round at Herts. Many thanks for the report Mark, here is what he had to say.

Herts winter series.

B-Turbo Super Soft

Well, the track was rolled and it started off quite cold in the morning so the only choice was the B turbo in the super soft compound, this was the first time I used them in this compound and once again I was more than happy with the results, even off line, which was very dusty, they worked superbly. Good turn in and superb forward bite. I was pleasantly surprised at the tyre wear, I did think they would be destroyed after the first round as they felt so soft, but I was very wrong, and decided to stay on them for round 2. Once again they were superb but by this time seeing as the ground was so hard and the track very flat, I decided that by the end I would be better off going with something more suitable for a Grooved in track. For those not in the know a track will Blue Groove in, which means that you should be able to see a darker racing line forming on the track, this is actually rubber from the tyres settling into the racing line.

B-Groove Soft

This is my tyre of choice at the moment, I really like this tyre when the dust has cleared, and I was not disappointed again, even though this is just the soft compound, I will say that this felt like a super soft too me, but I am assured it is just the soft. So I am going to try a set in super soft on my next purchase of tyres. But it was again a revelation, from nothing but a change of tyres; I dropped a second a lap, my average was down from quick 43's to quick 42's now that is a hell of a change. So I stayed on them for my last round, which was 10 seconds quicker than my last round, what a difference the tyre makes. And I did the final on them, B final I made which was good, and the consistency was superb from the tyre, very predictable as always, and even after the finish, still very good wear characteristics.

To be honest I have tried many different brands and at this time I am more than happy with the Louise rc tyre. I would be interested if you could get hold of some of the new B hornet tread pattern they have on their website.
